(x) Madagascar Royal Mail Neither the Kingdom of Imerina nor the other regions of Madagascar had any postal administration. A Royal Messenger Service was introduced in Imerina in 1790, utilising runners on an ad hoc basis. By 1828, a corps of runners linked the capital, Tananarivo with the port of Tamatave on the east coast, with Fianarantosa in the south central region, and Maevatanana in the central north. During the reign of the last Queen, Ranaivalona III (1883-97), pre-printed envelopes were used for official mail to the regional governors. In 1896, the last year of the Kingdom of Imerina's independence, the Malagasy Mail was established with a runner service from the capital to Tamatave. In one of the few portions of Madagascar not dominated by the Kingdom of Imerina, the King of Ifassy in the far north established a runner post in 1878 and again from 1882 which connected the mouth of the river Ifassy on the north-west coast to Vohemar on the north-east coast and onwards south to Sambava. This service linked the island of Nossi-be (off the north-west coast) to the east coast. 1824 (11 Jan.) entire letter from King Radama I (1810-1828) to James Hastle, the British Civil Agent in Madagascar (1817-1826) thanking him for the medicine which has cured his fever, the letter was carried locally in the village of Ambohicourohitry, fine and rare. By 1828, a corps of runners linked the capital, Tananarivo with the port of Tamatave on the east coast, with Fianarantosa in the south central region, and Maevatanana in the central north. During the reign of the last Queen, Ranavalona III (1883-97), pre-printed envelopes were used for official mail to the regional governors. In 1896, the last year of the Kingdom of Imerina's independence, the Malagasy Mail was established with a runner service from the capital to Tamatave. In one of the few portions of Madagascar not dominated by the Kingdom of Imerina, the King of Ifassy in the far north established a runner post in 1878 and again from 1882 which connected the mouth of the river Ifassy on the north-west coast to Vohemar on the north-east coast and onwards south to Sambava. This service linked the island of Nossi-be (off the north-west coast) to the east coast. 1861 (22 Oct.) entire letter from Rahaniraka, Principal Secretary at the Palace of Antananarivo to Col. Middleton on his way to Tamatave, showing three crosses indicating top urgency. Photoprovenance: Gavin Fryer David Feldman auction, May 2010, Lot 40022 Subject to 5% tax on Hammer Price in addition to 20% VAT on Buyer's Premium.
