Higgins Wonder Oil Company. Bond. 1914 (TX). $10. No. 324. Issued and uncanceled. Patriotic eagle flanked by photographic vignettes of Pattillo Higgins, Sr. President "Discover The Great Beaumont Oil Field" and Pattillo Higgins, Junior "Age Four Years Preparing For Future President". Liberty with Texas Arms at the bottom. Black on purple underprint and borders. A logger who ventured into turned real estate, then brick manufacturing, self-taught geologist Pattillo Higgins (1863-1955), was convinced oil lay below the "Salt Dome Mound" in the Spindletop field of Beaumont, Texas. In 1892, he formed the Gladys City Oil, Gas & Manufacturing Company. Formally-trained geologists poo-pooed the idea of oil being found there, while early drilling attempts were unsuccessful. Higgins resigned from the company, sold his stock, but wisely purchased 33 acres at the summit of Sour Hill Spring. Oil was finally struck in 1901 in the spot that Higgins predicted, with a geyser of oil over 150 feet high, which flowed an estimated 100,000 barrels per day. In its first year of operation Spindletop churned out 3 million barrels, then 17 million barrels the next year effectively ending John D. Rockefeller's world monopoly. Now known as the "Prophet of Spindletop", Higgins formed the Higgins Oil and Fuel Company and then the Higgins Wonder Oil Company, which actively drilled in Chambers, Wilson, Bexar and Gonzales counties of Texas. Good Very Fine with slight wear at the folds. A rare and historic bond; a similar example hammered at $2,100 in the Archive International Auction, October 19, 2013.

Platz, with seat (5, 8 and 9) stubs; and "Handbuch des Sports" cover (spine cracking). Seeking to outdo the 1932 Los Angeles Games, Adolf Hitler had a new 100,000-seat track and field stadium built for the 1936 Summer Olympics held in Berlin - the first ever Olympic Games to be televised (reaching 41 countries), as well as six gymnasiums and other smaller arenas. Hitler saw the Olympics as a propaganda vehicle to showcase Germany's might and the Nazi's heinous ideals of racial superiority and antisemitism. German Jewish athletes were barred or prevented by various means from participating in the Games. Jewish athletes from other countries were said to have been sidelined so as not to offend Hitler, while non-German Jewish athletes boycotted the games to protest the twisted ideals of the Nazi party. A few Jewish athletes, however, did participate. Robert Fein, an Austrian Jew even won gold in weightlifting (he was barred from competing next year) - much to Hitler's chagrin. But the greatest slap in the face to Nazi Germany's ideology and its presumption of Aryan superiority and supremacy was delivered by a young black American, James Cleveland "Jesse" Owens (1913-1980). Grandson of a slave, son of a poor Alabama sharecropper and his wife, Owens is regarded as one of Track and Field's greatest athletes. Before the eyes of the Führer und Reichskanzler and in his capital city, Owens achieved international fame becoming the first person in history to win four gold medals in a single Olympics.

Novae Insvlae, XVII Nova Tabvla. By Sebastian Munster (1488-1552). Published in Munster's "Cosmographiae Universalis Lib. VI", Basel, 1540. First edition, first state with Temistitan in North America and Insula Atlatica in South America and NOVVS ORBIS in North and South America. 13 3/8 x 10" (plus margins which have been trimmed). A fine woodcut map of the Americas stretching from Greenland, down the coast of Newfoundland to Florida and the Caribbean - with "CVBA" distinctly labeled - as far south as the Strait of Magellan. One of the most influential cartographers of the 16th Century, Munster depicts North America on the eve of Spanish exploration of the western interior; while the outline of South America is based on Magellan's voyage. Cannibals in South America are depicted, the Yucatan is misconstrued as an island, and 'terra florida' is named. The Portuguese flag flies next to South America. The Spanish flies over the Caribbean. The corners of Asia, Europe and Africa are near the borders, while a large ship sails at left. A seminal work, this is the earliest map to show all North and South America in true continental form and the first to name the Pacific Ocean -- "Mare pacificum". A Rare and important map. Some thinning spots, ".lae, XVII" of title faint (but clearly "XVII"), tiny hole near bottom margin and a few edge nips. Good. Attractively framed, 23 x 20".
